Criteria. The superlative candidate does not need to be a gifted academic student, but must possess a love for music and band. The ideal student demonstrates dedication to learning via consistent contributions in band, in preparation for concerts and competitions as well as enthusiasm to achieve excellence by helping other band students, going the extra mile to improve the band's performance or helping to ensure the future viability of the band program through its council or fundraising efforts. For this special student, band is a sanctuary from the stress of school and all the high school decisions that are especially acute in the Junior and Senior years. A passion for music, a love to give of oneself and a focus to continue in some music capacity describes the ideal candidate.
